

Baseball Cutoff and Backup Responsibilities

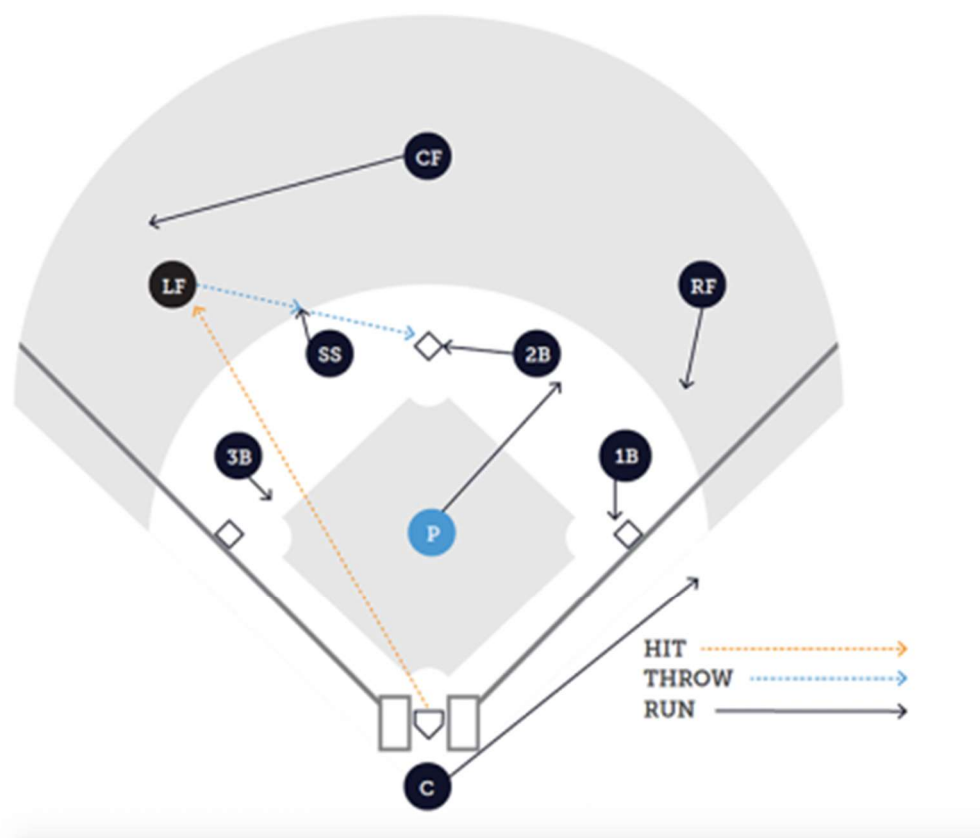

The ability to fulfill baseball cutoff and backup responsibilities is what separates the good teams from the bad ones, the great teams from the good ones. Very few execute properly.

Watch a typical youth baseball game when the ball gets hit into the outfield, and it's a free-for-all. A scramble. Infielders look around in

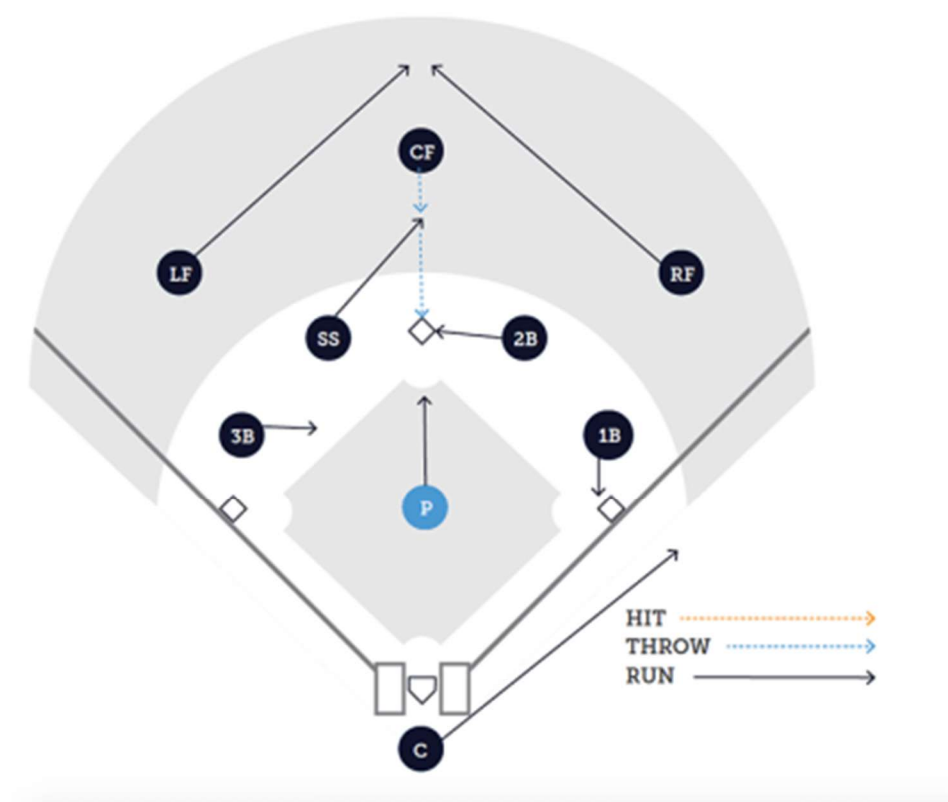

If you aren't moving — barring very few exceptions — you are likely doing something wrong. Cutoff and backup responsibilities are teamwork in action. Nine players moving at the same time for the purpose of advancing the team.
